Tricolour Bond

How does the ink rest on paper, bled the soldiers on the ground.
For their blood turned ar sacrifice of the dawn,
named as Saffron.

The peace of the rising sun,
The light of the blue ocean.
The cycle of the 24th hour, Together made of elegance and devotion.
Formed the fondness of the Indigo blue, under the host of the white lover..

The fertility of the growing land, and the plight of farmers.
spreading wider for the auspicious depths, laid down by the green's breath.

Together makes so much of a bond, ascose from the dreams that kept low, Shimmer of the dying voice,

from the ones who will be known forever Out from the lovers of the world, their own world of solitude and wan, left their world, for the sacrifice of the Tricdour Bond.

A love too pure

Imagine a love so pure it doesn't exit
one that spills itself into the floor boards, a stain no hand can wash away.

How can that be,
When the world is built to break what dares to shine?

Imagine a love so pure it doesn't exit
It curdles in the throat, never spoken Choking on its own silence.

There it lies,
on the pavement floor
no one bends to notice
Imagine a love so pure it doesn't exit
Well, not anymore
It clied as the work kept reaching, naming its cleuth
"Sacrifice"
